

36. GINGER

Two GINGER families are found in the Wilmot Township documents. We assume that they were part of the Amish Mennonite community. We know very little about the Ginger families as to their roots and to where their descendants are today. Perhaps we have a misspelling of their family name, perhaps it is Gingerich, but the records we have, give the spelling as Ginger.

This Ginger Family Genealogical Introduction will be divided into two sections;

1. Daniel and Catherine Ginger Family
2. The Daniel Gardner and Elizabeth Ginger Family

DANIEL AND CATHERINE GINGER FAMILY

When I (Lorraine Roth) first ran across the name Ginger in the Wilmot census of 1851, I thought it was probably supposed to be Gingerich. Daniel Ginger, age 53, was born in Switzerland, his wife Catherine, age 40, in France. The following children were probably all born in Canada. These are their estimated years of birth. The whereabouts of this family is unknown to us. We hope other researchers will inform us of their findings concerning this family.

1851 Census of Wilmot Township (Waterloo County, Upper Canada)

Daniel Ginger, age 53, born in Switzerland, wife Catherine, age 40, born in France.

Fanny - 1833

John - 1835

Catherine - 1836

David - 1839

Nancy - 1840

Leah - 1842

Mary - 1844

Barbara - 1846

Peter - 1848

The family was identified as Mennonite.

When, in my genealogical network, I found a John Ginger, I was hoping I had located a descendant of the Daniel Ginger family, since Daniel had a son John born in 1835. But John Ginger I found did not claim them as his ancestry; so their whereabouts is still a mystery. They appeared in the Wilmot census in 1851 only.

DANIEL GARDNER AND ELIZABETH GINGER

When searching for the Gardner family in the archival records for Lehrbach, Germany, I ran across the name Ginger again. Anna Barbara Gardner was born to Daniel Gardner and his "second wife Elsa Ginger" in 1811. Daniel, born ca.1771, and Elizabeth, his wife, born ca.1772, left Bremen, Germany, and arrived in New York on the Ship Juno on November 14, 1831. Several family members were with them. On the same ship were some Nahrgangs, who were from the same village as the Gardners. Other Amish Mennonites, such as the Benders, were on the same voyage. (1) (see note below)

GINGER

Since the birth of only one Gardner child was found at Lehrbach, it is not known whether the older Gardner children were born to Elizabeth Ginger or not. Daniel's death was reported in Canada Museum, a German newspaper published in Berlin (now Kitchener) in 1838, but we do not know when and where Elizabeth died. Since the publication of the newspaper did not begin until the summer of 1835, her death would not have been reported if she died before that time.
